ASEAN ELECTRICAL & ELECTRONIC MRA (CONFORMITY ASSESSMENT)
INFORMATION BOOKLET

1 INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background

1.1.1 This document seeks to set out a framework for the development of detailed criteria and explanatory notes for the designation of testing laboratories and certification bodies for the implementation of the ASEAN Electrical & Electronic Sectoral MRA.

1.1.2 The objective of the implementation of the E&E MRA is to ensure that once a regulated product is tested by a listed testing laboratory or certified by a listed certification body in the exporting member state, the product can enter and be marketed in the importing member state without being subjected to further conformity assessment in the importing member state. The standards to which a product is tested is determined by the technical regulations in the importing member state. Alternatively, the regulated product may be tested in the importing member state because the exporting member state may not have the testing facilities or because it could be cheaper to do so. Where the product is tested does not matter. What matters is that it should not be tested or certified more than once.

1.2 Parties Involved in Conformity Assessment

1.2.1 A comprehensive conformity assessment process would involve four distinct entities - a Designating Body, an Accreditation Body, a Testing Laboratory and a Certification Body. The model developed here makes the following assumptions:

- There must be a government agency in each member state which has the legal powers to assume the role of Designating Body (DB).
- Each member state has a National Accreditation Body (NAB).
- There is at least one laboratory in each member state with the technical expertise and the testing facilities to qualify to be considered for designation as a testing facility.
- There is at least one certification body in each member state with the technical expertise to qualify to be considered for designation as a certification body.

1.2.2 The Designating Body is the agency that identifies CABs to the Joint Sectoral Committee (JSC) for listing. Upon listing by JSC, the DB will then issue- Certificates of Designation to the Listed Conformity Assessment Bodies- either Testing Laboratories or Certification Bodies. The National Accreditation Body may assist the DB in the Conformity Assessment process in areas where it lacks technical expertise. The DB has the powers to suspend or withdraw Certificates of Designation in the event that the Testing Laboratories or Certification Bodies do not perform their duties faithfully or discharge their obligations.

2 CRITERIA FOR DESIGNATION AS LISTED CAB

In order to qualify as LISTED CAB to perform testing and/or certification for any regulated product to ASEAN MRA partner country's requirements, a CAB must fulfil the following criteria:

(a) It must be a legal entity, capable of suing and being sued in the country of designation;

(b) It must have sufficient capital and financial resources to maintain viable operations;

(c) It must be accredited by the National Accreditation Body (NAB) in accordance with the relevant International Organisation for Standardisation (ISO) International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC) standards OR must be a member of the IECEE CB Scheme or the IECEE FCS for testing laboratories and certification bodies respectively;

CAB can be accredited by NAB based on the following standards: -

- ISO/IEC 17025: 1999 for testing laboratories;
- ISO/IEC Guide 65: 1996 for product certification bodies.

The accreditation shall be relevant to the product types and technical regulations for which designation is sought;

(d) It shall not operate or be related to any other business that may compromise its role as LISTED CAB, so that there is no risk of the CAB conducting Conformity Assessment unfairly or with bias in the conduct of its business. However, manufacturers' own testing laboratories accredited by National Accreditation Bodies of ASEAN that are signatories to ILAC/APLAC MRA are exempted from this requirement ;

(e) It must have the knowledge, capability and competence to perform the tests or certification to relevant requirements specified by the Designating Body or stipulated under the ASEAN E&E MRA, which are applicable to its designation;

(f) In the case of an application for designation as a LISTED CAB, all requirements under the ASEAN E&E MRA have to be fulfilled.

(g) It shall provide to the Designating Body such other information or documents as may be required by the Designating Body;

(h) It shall provide the Designating Body or any such person as the Designating Body may authorise access to the laboratory or other premises of the CAB to enable the Designating Body or such person to observe and assess the testing and certification procedures of the CAB.
